

THE FIGHTING ROOSEVELTS

JAN SMITH

A PERSONALLY AUTHORIZED VERSION OF THE LIFE AND WORKS OF

Theodore Roosevelt

The life of Col. Roosevelt was a strenuous one. Cowboy, Rough Rider, Legislator at 23, Police Commissioner of New York, Mayor, Governor, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Vice President and President—the life of a fighting red, white and blue American.

From the Cradle to the White House—The Life Story of Colonel Roosevelt is Pictured Completely in this film.

Beginning with his youth when the other boys called him "Old Four Eyes," down to today when the nation hangs its flags at half mast in his memory, the story of Col. Roosevelt's life is a drama filled with big things, surging with emotions that make a nation great.

It is the story of a MADE-IN-AMERICA American and his part in the events that have made American History.

"The Strangest Fiction is Truth"

It moves with fighting action from the time that "Teddy" went West and won his victory over "Bad Ike," a desperado, and gaining the admiration of the fighting Westerners, led them to battle up San Juan Hill. The big things, the vital things that marked his career are pictured with realism in this remarkable human document.
